BOARD RULES THREE PLAYERS INELIGIBLE

Hausman, Spaulding, and McCarthy Are Not Property of the Waverley Club.

By JOHN A. DEGAN. Behind closed doors the board of governors of the Amateur Baseball Association last night disposed of the various protests. The outcome of the big assembly in the Central League can result in nothing but a victory for the Kiplingworth club, although the commission sent the matter back to the league for further action. It was proven by the books of Secretary Shurtless that Hausman, McCarthy and Spaulding were ineligible to participate in any games before July 7, and the nine games in which they played before this date were thrown out. In the case of Spaulding and McCarthy, claimed by the Waverley club, the registration was not received until July 20, therefore making them ineligible to play with Waverley and automatically throwing out every game in which these men took part. The foregoing decisions mean that the league will declare all contests in which the ineligible played no games, and as there is not time in which to finish out a schedule from this finding, the Kiplingworth club will likely be declared the winner. In the other big case between Whitney Avenue and Immanuel clubs in the Northwest Sunday School League because of the ineligibility of Elmer Doleman, the game of June 21 was thrown out and ordered to be played over immediately. In the Rosedale League the Trojan team was not considered as having a protest, and Holy Name and Highlanders, which clubs are tied in that circuit, will play a three-game series for the title, starting today. The many other contests regarding ineligibility of certain players were sent back to their respective leagues for action. Nothing definite came forward regarding the sectional series, but this matter will be settled at a meeting next Sunday.
